The announcement of his death was received with expressions of deep sorrow. He was held in high esteem by all who knew him, and was exceedingly popular.

"THE JUCKLINS."

The latest character of fiction to which Mr. Stuart Robson has lent the flesh-and-bloodism of his finished art, is said to be one of the best things he has ever done. In his new play "The Jucklins," he has made a radical departure, joining that eminent "coeterie" of American actors who have distinguished themselves by presenting a native character indigenous of our home soil. Lem Jucklin, the central character of the play, "The Jucklins," as portrayed by Mr. Robson, is a lovable old chap who in his rural simplicity has grown old easily and whose mature years have added materially to his attractiveness. This is a wide departure from the characters usually essayed by Mr. Robson, but it is said to offer him an excellent foil and opportunity to display a distinct individuality heretofore unknown to his many admirers. At the Academy of Music March 2.

A COLONIAL CONCERT.

On Thursday evening immediately after the meeting of Union League at Greene-Memorial Church, the young ladies of the Methodist Churches will give a most unique and interesting entertainment in the lecture room, which will be decorated in national colors. Gen. George Washington will receive, costumed after the fashion of yesteryear, in velvet breeches, lace cravat, courtly manner and powdered hair. His beloved Martha, also in colonial style, will assist. Then, too, will be the brave and gallant Lafayette, whose last visit to America is still much commented upon. Thousands cheered his landing. Thursday night he sits in audience to all patriotic citizens. And well worth a long journey it will be to behold the illustrious Patrick Henry, who on this occasion will deliver in brief his famous "Give me liberty or give me death." Captain John Smith's guardian angel, in her gorgeous war paint and feathers, will with the permission of Powhatan, grace this entertainment of the pale faces. Besides these there will be many other characters of note—true types of colonial days. Following the presentation of visitors will come an excellent musical and literary programme of corresponding nature. The art exhibition will prove a pleasant surprise, when it is remembered that all pictures exhibited are being painted by some of our most popular young ladies for this special occasion, and that nickels and dimes will buy them. But of all features, none are more interesting than the finale—refreshments gratis. Admission 10 cents.

VALUE RECEIVED is what you get when you buy Oysters and Lunches of all kinds at THE STAR LUNCH ROOM, 137 Salem avenue, J. B. Greenway, Manager.

Lawson's interest were taken care of by A. J. Oliver, colored, and Dr. Boland was represented by D. W. Harth, a colored school teacher. ### THE JUNIOR CELEBRATION.

Washington's birthday was variously celebrated in the city yesterday, by the closing of schools, banks, postoffice, courts and some of the railroad offices. The celebration by the Junior Order of United American Mechanics at the Old Opera House yesterday afternoon was a most decided success. The chorus which rendered the songs was a good one and they did their part well. Excellent addresses were made by several prominent citizens and the music of the Mandolin Club was especially good. Last but by no means the least enjoyable part of the programme was the duet rendered by Misses Craig and Tiplady. The following is the programme which was most acceptably rendered by all the participants:

1. Prayer, by Rev. Ira W. Kimmel.
2. Object of the meeting, J. E. Boehm, chairman.
3. Leaf From History, and song, "Star Spangled Banner."
4. Address, by Mayor W. K. Andrews.
5. Selection, by Mandolin Club.
6. Oration, by G. W. Crumpecker, Esq.
7. Song, "America."
8. Address by B. Rust, Esq.
9. Selection by Mandolin Club.
10. Declaration, by Miss Robertson.
11. Address by Col. J. W. Hartwell.
12. Duet, Miss Tiplady and Miss Craig.
13. Our Regiment's Departure.
14. Benediction by Rev. F. M. Marsh.

FELL OFF HIS TRAIN.

The news reached this city yesterday morning of the death of E. W. Hutchins, a freight brakeman on the Norfolk and Western. Mr. Hutchins in some manner fell off the top of a freight train at Hagerstown Junction on Monday and the train passed over his body and cut him in two pieces. He was well-known in this city, being a son of Captain Walter Hutchins, a popular passenger conductor on the Shenandoah Valley division.

LOCAL BILLS OF INTEREST.

The senate of Virginia on Monday passed a bill to amend and re-enact section 66 of the Code of Virginia in relation to redemption of delinquent lands, approved February 28, 1890. Also the bill to provide a charter for the Consolidated Railway and Electric Power Company, of Roanoke.

LOOKS A LITTLE DIFFERENT.

Dr. R. G. Gamble and son, R. H. Gamble of Bryan, Pa., are visiting Judge William Gordon Robertson and other relatives in the city. Dr. Gamble has not been in here since 1872, when Big Lick stood where a part of Roanoke now stands. The changes that have taken place since then were a most agreeable surprise to him.

Every garment bears the price-mark in "Plain Figures" at which its fellows have been sold, but we are collecting out all irregular lots and odd pieces and shall offer them this week about two-thirds the regular prices in each case. One part of the store will be set off for these bargains, and our readers are invited to see the exhibit. It may contain several things that you want.

FUN AT VIRGINIA COLLEGE.

Washington's birthday was the occasion of merry festivities at Virginia College. The holiday was spent in eager, interesting preparations for a grand colonial ball at night. We venture the assertion that such an event in colonial days was not anticipated with more intense enthusiasm than this one was. And it proved worthy of such interest. The Roanoke Machine Works Band furnished such excellent music that teachers and students alike were lulled into the whirling vortex of the old Virginia Reel and other colonial dances. The ball was opened by the entrance of the patriot fathers accompanied by a gay bevy of colonial damsels and damsels. The stately dignity of the patriots, the womanly elegance and grace of the damsels and damsels were evidently the inherited brightness of these young people whom destiny has brought upon the threshold of the twentieth century. The costume was so good that it was no mere fancy but a genuine resemblance which identified the benign countenance of Washington himself, the classic features of Jefferson and noted other remarkable resemblances. Two prizes were offered for the best characterization. The judges, unable to decide among so many good representations, left the result to Dame Fortune, and Misses Corinne Hays and Meta Linstedt drew the lucky straw, thus winning the prizes. Refreshments were served and everything went merrily as a dawning dream of fair women and brave men.

A MAN WHO WEIGHS 492.

Joe W. Grimes, of Cleveland, Ohio, a traveling representative of the Cleveland Bicycle Company, is in the city stopping at the Ponce de Leon. Mr. Grimes is without doubt the largest man who has ever been in this city as he weighs 492 pounds. He is said to be an expert wheelman and, notwithstanding his avoirdupois he can ride as fast as the average wheelman.

THE FUNERAL OF MR. MAHOOD.

The remains of the late Alexander B. Mahood who died last Sunday night were taken to Petersburg last night on the 11:30 o'clock train.
